

Transcript for Strip

097 — The Law of the Jingle

Panel 1: Ophelia is sitting at the kitchen table, a pen in her hand, a pad of paper in front of her. Theo enters the room and addresses her with, “Hi, Phee. What's up?” Ophelia, a harassed look on her face, replies, “Law office party. Trying to work up a catering menu.”

Panel 2: Theo has seated himself at the table, offering, “Keep it popular. Everyone loves that chicken from Popeye's.” Ophelia shrugs, saying, “Maybe. What about desserts and such? They're a picky bunch.”

Panel 3: Theo has a clever look on his face, and we suspect he's getting ready to make a joke. He says, “Nobody doesn't like Sara Lee. And America runs on Dunkin' Donuts.” Ophelia, looking confused, asks him, “What are you talking about.”

Panel 4: Theo grins, explaining, “It's the Law of the Jingle.” Leaning her face against her palm, Ophelia moans, “I'm not lovin' it.”

