

Transcript for Strip

280 — Just Another Week

Panel 1: In the living room of Nickey's apartment, Nickey and Sheila are hugging closely. Sheila says, "It's been amazing, pet. I don't want to go..." Nickey, just as warmly, says, "...but you have to. I know."

Panel 2: Still holding each other gently, the ladies smile at one another. Sheila promises, "We'll be together again soon. Meanwhile..." Nickey asks, "Just another week?"

Panel 3: In this panel, we're peeking into the house. Caedmon is in the living room, trying to read his book, when Theo comes bursting into the room, excitedly crying, "There's a new Jewish-Japanese restaurant in town. It's called So-Su-Mi." The badger is face-palming at the tiger's pun.

Panel 4: Sheila is grimacing at the thought of returning to the usual order of business in the house. "Yep," she agrees. "Just another week."

I lifted the joke in the third panel from Michael Krasny's book Let There Be Laughter: A Treasury of Great Jewish Humor and What It Means (p.250). I figure maybe he'd appreciate the plug.

