

Transcript for Strip

020 — Workin' It

Panel 1: We see Lightfoot, in human form, at his job in the library. A narration bar at the top reads, “Sometimes, the workplace can be a little stressful — even a library.” Lightfoot frowns as an unseen customer asks, “Do you have any books on kosher recipes for a pork roast?”

Panel 2: At her job in the SuperSport Store, Sheila (in human form) stands in front of a display of golf clubs. The narration bar reads, “When interacting with others, our housemates are seen as completely human by others.” Sheila is stifling a laugh as an unseen customer asks, “Could you help me choose my balls?”

Panel 3: In her office at the firm of Doolittle & Waite, Attorneys at Law, Ophelia is working at her computer; since she is alone, we see her in her skunk form. The narration bar reads, “If they don’t have to work with people directly, they can be more relaxed.” Ophelia types, “...therefore, we petition the court to grant our motion, because the other law firm’s action is just plain dumb.”

Panel 4: In his cubicle at The Last Hope Help Desk, we see Theo in his tiger form, as he is away from prying eyes. The narration bar reads, “...well, as relaxed as one can be when dealing with the public.” Theo is face-palming as a voice over his headset says, “I think the monitor is plugged in, but I can’t tell; the power’s out in the whole building.”

