

Transcript for Strip

041 — Adaptations

Panel 1: Ophelia (skunk) and Lightfoot (red fox) are seated on the sofa in the living room of the house. Ophelia asks, “Lightfoot, you were the first person to find the house, right?” “Yes,” he replies. “Moved in all by myself, for a month or so.”

Panel 2: The skunk wonders, “How did you manage to get used to your anthro form so easily?” “Well,” the fox considers thoughtfully, “I wouldn’t say ‘easily.’ There were a lot of things to get used to.”

Panel 3: He continues, “It’s amazing how much we take for granted in our day-to-day existence, that we had to re-learn once we found our anthro selves.”

Panel 4: In a flashback, in the bathroom of the house, we see a large puffball in the vague shape of a red fox, holding a blow-dryer in his hand. A thought bubble reveals, “Note to Self: A hair dryer is not necessarily a good solution after a shower.”

