013 — Musical Scales

Panel 1: In a double-width panel, we see Theo in the shower, happily sudsy and belting out a song. Judging by the jagged depiction of notes on an equally shaky musical stave, the white tiger's singing is likely to be less than melodious.

Panel 2: In another double-width panel, Sheila and Ophelia are seated on a couch in the living room, holding their forepaws over their affronted ears. The kangaroo asks, "Why do cats always sound so horribly off-key?" The skunk replies, "Humans tune on a diatonic scale; felines use a catatonic scale."
