010 — Proper Titles

- Panel 1: Once again at the dining table, Lightfoot, Ophelia, and Caedmon are continuing their conversation. The fox asks, “Are things really that bad at work, Ophelia?” The badger opines, “How could they be good? She works at a law firm.”
- Panel 2: The lady skunk observes, “The law is really fascinating; it’s the people it attracts that I have trouble with. One of my bosses, for instance...”
- Panel 3: Ophelia, in her human form, is standing in front of a desk; we don’t see her boss in the frame. Behind Ophelia is a plaque reading DOOLITTLE & WAITE, Attorneys at Law. The man behind the desk says, “I simply feel that, having earned my Juris Doctorate, I should be called by my proper title.”
- Panel 4: Ophelia looks at us and, because she’s sharing her thought, we see her in her skunk form. She thinks, Dr. Doolittle? Her boss continues speaking: “I worked hard for it, after all...”
