038 — Tied for Second Place

- Panel 1: In the otherwise empty library, Lightfoot (in his red fox form) is dusting off a book from the shelf near him, the bust of Richard Nixon is saying, “Beautiful day, Lightfoot.” The fox observes, “You seem to want to talk today.”
- Panel 2: Nixon’s bust continues, “I have such a bright viewpoint these days, I’m practically glowing.” Lightfoot turns to him and asks, “And what is the cause of this good humor?”
- Panel 3: The bust of Nixon takes up the entire frame as he says, “I’d lived for years with the stigma of being considered the worst president in U.S. history. But now, after the 45 fiasco...”
- Panel 4: Lightfoot, arms folded, asks, “So how does it feel to be in second place?” Nixon’s statue replies, “Tied with Dubya? Terrific!”
