025 — Heavy Gig

Panel 1: Caedmon (badger) is seated at the house's kitchen table, reading a newspaper. Sheila (kangaroo) steps over to him, greeting him with "Wotcha, mate?" Caedmon looks up and smiles at her. "Good morning to you too, Sheila."

Panel 2: Peering over the badger's shoulder, the 'roo says, "Situations Vacant, eh? Job-hunting's not fun." Looking back to the paper, the badger opines, "It's a form of cruel and unusual punishment against the poor."

Panel 3: Sheila points to the paper. She says, "Now here's a perfect job for a bright ray of sunshine like yourself: Lead Toddler Teacher."

Panel 4: Caedmon remarks, "I've never taught lead toddlers; only those made of pewter and brass." Sheila chuckles, "I never figured you for a fan of heavy metal."

For those using a Read Aloud function, the first use of the word is similar to "take the lead," while the second is similar to "made of lead." The AI may not pick up the difference.
